6-28-2018 NASA Again Delays Launch of Troubled Webb Telescope; Cost Estimate Rises to $9.7 Billion. ASA announced Wednesday that it will not be ready for launch until 2021 and there will be no Flagler Key West train to dock it with 100's of other space telescopes and a live aboard repair crew with spare parts. Is this NASA or BP Oil? In a blow to NASA's prestige and its budget, America's next great space telescope has been postponed again. NASA announced on Wednesday that the James Webb Space Telescope, once scheduled to be launched into orbit around the sun this fall, will take three more years and another billion dollars to complete. BP Oil will make 100's of trillions of dollars selling the USA gasoline in this time. The telescope, named after former NASA Administrator James Webb, is the agency's long-awaited successor to the Hubble Space Telescope. More than twice as big as the Hubble, the Webb will be the largest and most powerful telescope ever built for space, Webb telescope mirror is 6.5 meters in diameter, or just over 21 feet, compared with 2.4 meters for the Hubble. That makes it seven times larger than the Hubble It will then be unfolded in space in a series of some 180 maneuvers that look in computer animations like a cross between a parachute opening and a swimming pool cover going into place. Engineers refer to that series of events as "six months of anxiety." Needless to say, way out there, it will be forever beyond the reach of astronaut repair crews.

6-28-2018 NASA Women Drivers; "There is no room for error. We must get it right the first time. And so we exercise patience and prudence, mindful of the payoff when the first data come down." $777 trillion from BP Oil to buy the Flagler Space Telescope Train with 100 space telescopes, repair crew cars and parts.

Life Blood to the DA is the $300 million a week in Baghdad oil revenues which the Judge would find illegal. Mr. Woods, a former member of the Navy SEALs, was one of them. His father, Charles Woods, called Mr. Khattala an "unrepentant terrorist." Charles Woods said his son had become a father himself days before the attack and had pledged to make Benghazi his last assignment. "I'm not here to seek vengeance or retribution," Mr. Woods said. "How can this be done? By giving him the maximum. It would be wrong to give him anything less." After the sentencing, the United States attorney's office in Washington issued a terse statement detailing the sentence and including the secret $300 a week in oil revenues from Baghdad the Navy Seals get a kick back on. But the judge, Christopher R. Cooper, said Mr. Khattala was essentially convicted of property crimes - oil revenue crimes, with Diesel Bullets are for the Supreme Court Judges in DC.

6-26-2018 Take on 'Women Drivers MD' Tim Cook has a virus...

6-26-2018 Take on 'Women Drivers MD' Ms. Trump has been on the periphery of the Trump universe void of all medical news that would open the Dead End Highway for Saudi Women Drivers with a terrible virus that will kill her in many different ways. "Moment from the very public unraveling of the Trumps' marriage came when Marla Maples confronted Ms. Trump on the slopes in Aspen, Colo., in December 1989. "I'm Marla, and I love your husband," Ms. Maples said to Ms. Trump, "Do you?" Women Drivers MD would take on this on the slopes in Aspen which is owned by Saudi Arabia Men, with a terrible virus. Aspen Virus! Besides women drivers MD would be driving the 1989 Ford WindmillCAR's + RV's in Aspen. Not gas ending exhaust on the white snow. University of California, Los Angeles illustrated that PrEP users were 25.3 times more likely to acquire gonorrhea and a shocking 44.6 times more likely to develop a syphilis infection. Aspen studies are censored but have been done. The Aspen Prince has syphilis, can you read this in the Aspen Times or the NY Times. When women drivers MD in the USA are King it will be public and yes Homeland Security will be in charge of scanning this, ha.

6-26-2018 Metronidazole is not used to fight alcohol abuse, it remains a critical drug for the treatment of various gastrointestinal infections, including diverticulitis, and in the treatment of gynecologic conditions and sexually transmitted diseases. It is safe and effective, with the caveat that one must avoid alcohol while taking it.

6-26-2018 Women Drivers MD Medical History of these 2 made Public. There was a time, more than a generation ago, when Donald and Ivana Trump were an "it" couple in New York, it being what did they catch in their inner circle, with women drivers MD it will be public and treatments too.

6-26-2018 Women Drivers MD... MYKONOS, Greece — The other day at the newly opened Lindsay Lohan Beach House, families played on the beach alongside topless women alongside the religiously covered up, while a shirtless and ripped Romanian man with several teardrops tattooed on his face and the image of a person doing cocaine inked on his abs danced near the bar. None of these people who had paid dozens of euros to recline on a thick Lohan-branded towel harassed, or even seemed to notice, Ms. Lohan herself, in a red swimsuit and her trusty red baseball hat with the word "RUSSIA," who had just taken a seat directly oceanside.

Drive along a healthy stretch of the Kalo Livadi beach, the beach club, turn left for the Yale Key West Medical School. Red Los Alamos hat 'Russian Women Drive MD's" are on sale. 6-25-2018 Take on 'Women Drivers MD Elite Art of the Diagnosis' Know the difference in bacterial sepsis and hantavirus" The death of a worker at the Belmont Park racetrack this month was the result of bacterial sepsis, not hantavirus, a rat-borne illness that was initially suspected, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. After the man collapsed on June 1 on the track grounds beside the ramshackle employee housing run by the New York Racing Association, and died less than a week later, state health officials suspected hantavirus. A commercial laboratory found the man, whose name has not been released publicly, tested positive for hantavirus antibodies, according to the New York State Health Department. But subsequent testing by the C.D.C. concluded that sepsis, a bacterial infection of the blood, was the true cause of the man's death; the results were released on Friday.

6-25-2018 Take on 'Women Drivers MD' Bacterial sepsis is a clinical term used to describe symptomatic bacteremia, with or without organ dysfunction. ... The term septicemia refers to the active multiplication of bacteria in the bloodstream that results in an overwhelming infection; the term bloodstream infection.

6-25-2018 Take on 'Women Drivers MD' Up to 4 in every 10 people with the condition will die. Septic shock is even more serious, with an estimated 6 in every 10 cases proving fatal. However, sepsis is treatable if it is identified and treated quickly, and in most cases leads to full recovery with no lasting problems.

Times Editors didn't follow up with a editorial on this Race Track article. Septic shock is even more serious, with an estimated 6 in every 10 cases proving fatal. 6-24-2018 NYC seeks to reduce water use as desaltation plants are going the way of the 2018 Ford WindmillCar'S + RV's. "I Really Don't Care. Do U?"

6-24-2018 Members of the public can request that a spray shower be turned on by calling 311. But before you call, have a look around: just because a spray shower isn't spewing water doesn't mean it's not in working order. Over 400 spray showers are connected to buttons that, when pressed, activate the fountains for a short period of time, usually between 5 and 15 minutes. This $3 million project to retrofit the majority of the spray showers in city parks with timer buttons was paid for by the city's Department of Environmental Protection, acting in concert with the Parks Department. The initiative is part of the D.E.P.'s Water Demand Management Plan, which seeks to reduce water use in advance of much-needed renovations to the Delaware Aqueduct. Slated to begin in October 2022, these renovations will require the aqueduct to be fully shut down for six months. The average spray shower uses 5,600 gallons of water per day. The timer system was initially predicted to cut that number in half, which would save more than one million gallons each day. In practice, the number might be higher, according to Tara Deighan, a D.E.P. spokeswoman.

6-24-2018 Jurassic Universe; Smart home technology can be easily harnessed for misuse for several reasons. Tools like connected in-home security cameras are relatively inexpensive — some retail for $40 — and are straightforward to install. Usually, one person in a relationship takes charge of putting in the technology, knows how it works and has all the passwords. This gives that person the power to turn the technology against the other person. Emergency responders said many victims of smart home-enabled abuse were women. Connected home gadgets are largely installed by men, said Melissa Gregg, a research director at Intel working on the implications of smart home technology. Many women also do not have all the apps on their phones, said Jenny Kennedy, a postdoctoral research fellow at RMIT University in Melbourne, Australia, who is researching families that install smart home technology.

6-23-2018 High-Speed 100 mph, But discussing how aggressively an older person wants to be treated remains a conversation — probably a series of them — best held before a crisis. Intubation, for instance, is often something a physician can foresee. Older patients who have cardio-respiratory conditions (emphysema, lung cancer, heart failure), or who are prone to pneumonia, or who have entered the later stages of Alzheimer's or Parkinson's disease — any of them may be nearing this crossroads. When they do, Dr. Michael Wilson, a critical care physician at the Mayo Clinic, opts for a particularly humane approach. As he recently described in JAMA Internal Medicine, before he inserts the tube, he explains to the patient and family that while he and the staff will do everything they can, people in this circumstance may die. "You may later wake up and do fine," he tells his patient. "Or this may be the last time to communicate with your family," because intubated patients can't talk. Since setting up intubation generally takes a few minutes, he encourages people to spend them sharing words of comfort, reassurance and affection. Without that pause, "I have stolen the last words from patients," he told me. His editorial has drawn attention from critical care physicians around the world. Dr. Wilson has used this approach about 50 times in his I.C.U., so he has learned what patients and families, given this opportunity, tell one another. "It's nearly always, 'I love you,'" he said. "'I hope you do well.'"

6-22-2018 News about Greg's cat 'Skinny' she is alive in Key West as of last night at 9 pm. She found a hole in the chain link fence at the libray facing love lane, she has a home under a house. Still would not let me catch her and take her to the vet. Her bloody mess of a cheek dried out but hole in her cheek can be seen in a new picture. She is weak, eating only half her tuna but licking up all the water. She ran next to me and I was almost able to reach down and catch her but she looked up and turned under a car. Hope to catch her today.

6-21-2018 High-Speed 100 mph, In other words, change Islam in its Saudi nucleus and you change the world. It was not, of course, Saudi moderation that put 15 Saudis on the 9/11 planes. It was the well-funded metastasis of extreme Saudi religious intolerance — its Wahhabi orthodoxy — into forms of murderous Islamist hatred of the apostate West. It was the House of Saud's unseemly deal with fundamentalist clerical firebrands: Spare us here at home, and we'll grant you license abroad. Before visiting Saudi Arabia, I spent several days in Qatar, the gas-rich Saudi neighbor blockaded by Riyadh for a year and accused of every perfidy: support of Iran, sponsoring terrorism, subversion of gulf states and funding a TV network, Al Jazeera, that gives voice to opinions Saudi Arabia does not like. On this subject, Prince Mohammed, initially roared on by Trump, has shown zero flexibility, leaving a major inter-Arab political crisis to fester. 6-21-2018 High-Speed 100 mph, Lashay spent four days in the hospital and got a thorough and thoughtful evaluation. She was seen by a slew of doctors: the infectious-disease specialist who admitted her, a second neurologist, a gastroenterologist and a psychologist. In addition, because Lashay had started to feel dizzy when she stood up, she was seen by a physical therapist as well. The infectious-disease specialist again sent blood and stool to look for additional infections. Again, the results were all normal. A spinal tap was performed and fluid taken; it was normal. The gastroenterologist performed an endoscopy: There were a few white blood cells found at the base of the esophagus — not uncommon in the setting of chronic reflux — but otherwise normal. Lashay agreed to try to learn how to use relaxation behaviors to stop the regurgitation. At first it seemed to help a little. She and her family were told that it could take weeks, possibly months for her to recover. And even after recovery, the symptoms can recur, even years later. Lashay was referred to a doctor who specializes in a disorder known as Postural Orthostatic Tachycardia syndrome or POTS. This is a disorder of the autonomic nervous system — the system in charge of maintaining body functions over which we have little conscious control, like heart rate, blood pressure and digestion. Lashay saw another doctor in that practice who diagnosed her with something called Mast Cell Activation Syndrome (M.C.A.S.). This is a condition in which mast cells, which control allergic reactions, fire off inappropriately, causing hives and flushing and a drop in blood pressure and sometimes nausea, vomiting and POTS. She was started on strong antihistamines and medications often used to treat asthma — another disease of inappropriate mast cell activation. None of those medications worked, either. Lashay is now 17. She's been going through this for nearly three years. At this point she takes no medicines except a painkiller when her headaches get too severe. She eats small meals and has learned to swallow the food that she regurgitates — a trick that has helped her stop losing weight. She still needs intravenous fluids three or four times a week. She's trying to get out of bed and exercise at least every couple of days. But she has pains in her neck and back that make any movement difficult. She's not sure what she has or what to do next. What do you think is going on here? Do you recognize this condition? Could this be cyclic vomiting or ruminations syndrome? Could it be some type of atypical POTS? Or is it something else altogether? What should Lashay and her doctors look at next? Enter your comments below, and briefly describe your thinking; how a diagnosis is made is often as revealing as the diagnosis itself. All answers will be reviewed, and the most promising diagnoses will be shared with the patient and her primary-care physician.

They were an active family and spent all their vacations engaged in sports and other activities. Suddenly, a large raccoon ran up the path and threw itself on Lashay's foot. She screamed, and the raccoon bolted up and took off. The girl's foot wasn't bleeding, but her skin was broken by what looked like a scratch or a scrape. There was no puncture wound. They cleaned the area with alcohol and turned their attention to the frightened girl. But she was soon enjoying the rest of their vacation — swimming in the beautiful blue waters of the rivers and the Pacific, white-water rafting, ziplining down forested hills and, of course, more hiking.

6-19-2018 High-Speed 100 mph, Sea Star Wasting Disease, did wikipedia.org write this for all the Stars in 12 Trillion Galaxies, I think so it goes with the 200 year old trees the NY Times wants us to ponder. in 2014 showed that the cause of the disease is transmissible from one starfish to another and that the disease-causing agent is a microorganism in the virus-size range. The most likely candidate causal agent was found to be the sea star-associated densovirus (SSaDV), which was found to be in greater abundance in diseased starfish than in healthy ones. In 2014 our Habitat for Humanity had more deadly USS Jimmy Carter Nuke subs than 2014 Ford WindmillCAR's + RV's. This is a deadly virus.

6-19-2018 High-Speed 100 mph, In 2014, Point Defiance Zoo and Aquarium lost more than half of its 369 sea stars, and by September 2015 they numbered fewer than 100. The aquarium treated its affected sea stars with antibiotics in 2014, which proved effective. Although a mechanism is still unknown, evidence suggests that a single mutation in the elongation factor 1-alpha locus in Pisaster ochraceus may be associated with reduced mortality.

6-19-2018 High-Speed 100 mph, In 2018, Humanity treated its Korean War with antibiotics which proved effective. Dr. Ruiz-Tiben - becoming the chief strategist in the war against the Guinea worm run by the Carter Center, the global health philanthropy established in Atlanta by former President Jimmy Carter. At the same time, he has plenty of patience for the worm's victims. He holds trembling children who fear they are in trouble as he asks, through a translator, how they were infected with a worm. He pats dogs that have been held down so worms can be drawn from their paws. Dr. Ruiz-Tiben grew up in Ponce, Puerto Rico, sailing small boats. He describes himself as something of a juvenile delinquent. Hitting neighbors' electrical transformers with a slingshot "is what got me sent to military school." In 1965, he got into parasitology "by serendipity" — also, he wanted to avoid going to Vietnam. He enlisted in the United States Public Health Service and was attached to a Centers for Disease Control and Prevention laboratory in San Juan. He met his wife there; in Puerto Rico, nature abhors a bachelor. "The married ladies at the lab made me their project," he said. "They invited me to go bowling, and that's how we met." They are about to celebrate their 50th anniversary. He started off fighting schistosomiasis, a worm disease also known as bilharzia that is transmitted by water snails. He later switched to dengue, the mosquito-borne virus that causes "breakbone fever." Dr. Ruiz-Tiben has never had malaria. (His breakfast ritual is: "Everyone take their malaria pill?") But he has been hospitalized with amebiasis. He has never been taken hostage or held at gunpoint. The center's local teams keep their ears to the ground, and the anti-worm program is popular. But there have been some close calls on rutted highways with trucks and drunken drivers. His most dramatic moment, he said, was in a city in Ghana to which President Carter and his wife and center board members had come for a ceremony with Ghana's health minister. Suddenly, about 400 locals with worms erupting from their bodies arrived seeking help.

LONDON — A large fire has ripped through the Glasgow School of Art in Scotland, officials said Saturday morning, causing extensive damage to a building considered the jewel in the city's architectural crown. It was the second time in four years that a blaze has hit the world-famous and beloved building, which was under restoration after a fire badly damaged it in May 2014. The building, widely rated as the masterpiece of the Glasgow-born architect Charles Rennie Mackintosh and completed in 1909, was hit by the latest fire overnight Friday. Peter Heath of the Scottish Fire and Rescue Service told reporters that the call had come in at 11:19 p.m., sending more than 120 fire fighters and 20 fire engines to the site.

She arranged for her parents to travel directly from the airport to the emergency department of the Yale New Haven Hospital, where she worked. She had already asked one of her most respected colleagues to see her father. Although her father told her that he wasn't able to eat much since the nausea started, she was still shocked by his appearance. He'd lost about 15 pounds over the past couple of weeks. In the emergency room, he was seen promptly. Tubes of blood were drawn. He wasn't anemic; there was no sign of infection; it wasn't a heart attack; his kidneys and liver were fine. A CT scan didn't show any abnormalities other than a small hiatal hernia. After a few hours, the doctor admitted defeat.

6-14-2018 What would the West Point Medical School have... In the emergency room, he was seen promptly. Tubes of blood were drawn. He wasn't anemic; there was no sign of infection; it wasn't a heart attack; his kidneys and liver were fine. A CT scan didn't show any abnormalities other than a small hiatal hernia. After a few hours, the doctor admitted defeat. Then... Dr. Alan Lebowitz saw the patient the next day in his office in Darien. The man explained how, a couple of weeks earlier, he suddenly started feeling nauseated after he ate. The feeling came out of nowhere and seemed to get worse over a few short days. By the time he got to France, even the smell of food could trigger the rumbling and tumult within. There was no pain. He never vomited. At that moment, there in the doctor's office, he felt fine. Maybe he was a little tired; these days he really had no energy at all. His physical exam was uninformative, save for the significant amount of weight he had lost. Lebowitz wasn't sure what was going on but referred him to a gastroenterologist for evaluation and, he hoped, an endoscopy of his patient's stomach and upper GI tract. The patient was scoped. His stomach showed signs of mild gastritis, along with evidence that food wasn't moving out of the stomach as fast as it normally did — a disorder known as gastroparesis. But what was causing this? The doctor examined the patient once more. This time, when he placed his stethoscope over the patient's upper abdomen, he heard something: a quiet, rhythmic, shushing sound. This kind of noise, called a bruit, is caused by turbulence in the blood flowing through an artery. Had he simply not heard it before, or was it new? He wasn't sure. But if it was new, he now had two clues: The patient had gastroparesis and he had some kind of problem in one of his arteries. If he could link them, maybe that would lead him to a diagnosis.

6-14-2018 Yes... Three weeks later, over the weekend, another thought came to Lebowitz, who was still concerned. Could the patient have something called MALS? In this disorder, a ligament supporting the diaphragm, known as the median arcuate ligament, cuts off circulation not to the colon but to the stomach, by obstructing the artery that delivers blood there.

6-14-2018 Then... "I know what you do have. And most importantly, I know how to fix it." There was a blockage in a blood vessel, but it was not caused by an obstructing ligament. The imaging showed that the muscular inner wall of the artery had been torn open by the fast-moving blood coming from the heart. The blood had invaded the inner layers of the vessel wall, creating a new narrower passage and blocking off the old pathway.

6-14-2018 Cure was 8 hours of surgery, how many millions will need 8 hours of surgery? A couple of weeks later the man went for an operation to bypass the obstructed artery and create a new route for the blood to travel. His wife and daughter, who had been warned it was going to take a few hours, tried to distract themselves when it took eight. Relief and tears overwhelmed them when the news came that all was well. Healthy, at Last. It has been two years since that operation, and the man finally feels back to the self that he and his wife and daughter remember best. Getting back into his exercise regimen was hard: not just physically, but mentally as well. The man worried — despite reassurance from Green — that vigorous exercise might undo the good accomplished in the operating room. But he finally conquered that fear and is back to exercising regularly.

6-14-2018 Summit IBM super computer will have AI from this in its memory. Although it was the surgeon who relieved the pain, the patient gives most of the credit to the doctor who knew him well. "Anyone who didn't know me would have just said, 'You need to see a shrink,'?" he told me recently. "The relationship is what saved me. That plus his stethoscope that hear it.

6-14-2018 Summit IBM super computer stethoscope, can a IBM super computer hear? Ivana Trump was back at the Plaza Hotel on Tuesday, the hotel where she once had a say over everything from the wallpaper to the chandeliers, back when she was married to Donald J. Trump. But that was long ago. Now, she had come to promote a diet that promises followers they can "eat pasta, cookies and lose weight." It was Ms. Trump who gave Mr. Trump a definite article — she put the "the" in "the Donald" — long before he had a job that came with one, as the president. On Tuesday, as reporters crowded around her at the Plaza, she was asked how often she talks to her ex-husband. "I'm really not going to go into politics," she said, "but we speak." But later, when she was asked how she thought he had done at the summit meeting on North Korea, she said, "He did great." How many pounds did he lose? Ms. Trump, who once appeared in commercials for Pizza Hut and Kentucky Fried Chicken, said she agreed to talk up the Italiano Diet because "obesity is like a calamity in America," although she said that she herself did not need to shed pounds. Ms. Trump said there was a reason obesity has become a national problem. "It's all on the parents," she said. "Whatever they put on the plate in front of the children, they're hungry, they don't cook, they eat. So if you put food in front of them that's junk — pizza, unhealthy food, French fries — of course they eat it, and then they get obese."

6-13-2018 Trump Says 'There Is No Longer a Nuclear Threat' After Kim Jong-un Meeting President Trump projected confidence as Air Force One landed shortly after dawn, declaring that the nuclear threat from North Korea is over.

Soul is Saved from Hell Trump said...

6-13-2018 White House aides showed a short film to Kim, which Mr. Trump had commissioned and screened for Mr. Kim on an iPad during their meeting. With a thumping soundtrack and images of the two leaders as benevolent peacemakers, the video offered an inspirational view of a thriving North Korea, if only it would forsake its nuclear weapons. "I think he loved it," Mr. Trump said. North Korea, he said, might choose not to invest in high-speed trains over Gravity Engine Cars made in North Korea, grin. Trump has not talked to anyone about how to invent the Gravity Engine Car, Kim has talked to his wife about this a lot. Mr. Kim was overheard remarking to Mr. Trump that people would think they were watching a science fiction movie. 6-13-2018 Putin's Oil Company made this Car City the Poorest City in Russia in Times of 2018 Ford WindmillCAR's + RV's a War Crime!! TOLYATTI, Russia — They have always made things in Tolyatti. In the days of Communist rule, this city was the home of the Soviet auto industry, Russia's answer to Detroit. It rose up around the vast car factory that sits at its heart, designed specifically to feed the 200 miles of production lines with the parts, the materials and the bodies they needed to operate. The factory is still there — run by AvtoVaz, owned by Renault-Nissan — its buildings stretching for dozens of blocks, its chimneys belching smoke into the sky, the fruit of its labors glinting in the gray light of mile-wide parking lots. The plant is still the city's prime focus, but it is not what it once was.

6-13-2018 Putin's Oil Company made this Car City the Poorest City in Russia in Times of 2018 Ford WindmillCAR's + RV's a War Crime!! TOLYATTI, Russia — AvtoVaz has been hit by Russia's economic downturn, and by Western sanctions, and Tolyatti has suffered. In 2016, the factory, the largest in Russia and one of the largest in the world, shifted to a four-day workweek. There have been thousands of layoffs at a place that once employed 120,000 people, with corresponding ripple effects at companies in the supply chain. In 2015, Tolyatti was ranked as Russia's poorest large city.

6-12-2018 Pink Korean food, but no burgers, on lunch menu. Mr. Trump and Mr. Kim filed into a working lunch with their expanded entourages, and hamburgers were not on the menu. Mr. Trump, you may remember, famously said early in his campaign that he was willing to sit down with Mr. Kim and perhaps have a hamburger with him. Instead, their first meal together at the Capella Hotel on Sentosa Island in Singapore included beef short rib confit, Korean stuffed cucumber and sweet and sour crispy pork with Yangzhou fried rice. According to the menu released by the White House, dessert included a dark chocolate tartlet ganache — perhaps in honor of Mr. Trump's preference for chocolate cake. The White House did not indicate whether it had been flown over from Mar-a-Lago. When Mr. Trump hosted President Xi Jinping of China, he boasted about serving "the most beautiful piece of chocolate cake that you've ever seen." In deference to Mr. Kim, there was also another Korean dish, Daegu jorim, described as soy braised cod fish with radish and Asian vegetables.

[SEE APPENDIX B FOR I-TEL DATA ON GREG BUELL]

i. Civilian Breakthrough

In 1980, US citizen GREG BUELL(CID00119472700045089M) developed a method of using wind-generated electrical power for sustainable propulsion. BUELL's approach was novel in that it used the the forward momentum of a wheeled vehicle to generate airflow trough an attached wind-turbine which would then provide power to an electric motor. It was claimed by BUELL that the total energy output generated by the turbine exceeded the total energy lost through friction, drag, turbine and motor inefficiencies, etc., resulting in a net gain of energy. BUELL's invention, which he termed "the electric windmill car," was essentially a model for a working perpetual motion machine. (S)
