7-7-2015 Nightly News From Key West with Greg + Wives... I think a Super Computer at Los Alamos could have won the Inventor of the Year Award for nitric Oxide in mid-1980's right after the 1980 Electric Windmill Ford Escort Era of Windfall Invention + Windmill's in Animal Farm were crunched by the trillions at Los Alamos looking for every invention possible. Not to be confused with the anesthetic gas nitrous oxide, nitric oxide was long considered to be only a toxic pollutant gas. But in the mid-1980s, three U.S. investigators discovered that it is a signal-transmitting molecule naturally used by the pulmonary, cardiac and other systems, a discovery that received the 1998 Nobel Prize. Among its many functions, NO relaxes muscles surrounding blood vessels, which reduces blood pressure - a property that led Zapol and his colleagues to investigate its use to treat hypertension in vessels supplying the lungs. Their discovery that inhaled NO selectively relaxed pulmonary vessels without producing a systemic drop in blood pressure led to the therapy's FDA approval in 1999 for the treatment of PPHN and other lung diseases in newborns. In 2003 Zapol and his former research fellow Claes Frostell, MD, PhD, received the Inventor of the Year award. Zapol, the Reginald Jenney Professor of Anesthesia at Harvard Medical School. NO therapy is very expensive - here at MGH five days treatment of a newborn with PPHN costs around $14,000 - and current systems use gas delivered in heavy tanks, making ambulatory treatment impractical.
