4-12-2015 Certain types of supernovae, or exploding stars, are more diverse than previously thought, a University of Arizona-led team of astronomers has discovered. The results, reported in two papers published in the Astrophysical Journal, have implications for big cosmological questions, such as how fast the universe has been expanding since the Big Bang. Most importantly, the findings hint at the possibility that the acceleration of the expansion of the universe might not be quite as fast as textbooks say.

Ambitions make rivals of Florida Republicans

MIAMI

Job Bush's mentorship of Marco Rubio opened by the race for president

BY MICHAEL BARBARO

An Marco Rubio debated whether to run for the United States Senate in 2010, he made a pledge: sleep in his study and deference. He would never challenge his political mentor, Job Bush, if the former Florida governor wanted the job himself. This time around, Mr. Rubio is not asking for permission.

Mr. Rubio's plan to enter the presidential campaign here on Monday, upstaging Mr. Bush in his own backyard, signals a decisive, Shakespearean turn in a 15-year relationship so close, personal and enduring that friends describe the two men as almost family.

It is a bond that has stretched from Miami to Washington, punctuated by late-night telephone consultations, fueled by mutual enmity and fixated on reimagining conservatism with big ideas, according to dozens of insiders.

The bond-on collision of Mr. Bush's and Mr. Rubio's presidential aspirations, once viewed as an outlandish prospect in this state, is now consuming their hometown with talk of uncharted ambitions and political backstabbing.

But precisely who betrayed whom is a matter of intense debate. Is it the over-zealous young protégé unwilling to wait his turn? Or the prestigious senator, who left government for eight years and sent every signal that he was done with

Pakistan frees leader of militant group on bail

ISLAMABAD, PAKISTAN

Zaki-ur-Rehman Lakhvi was accused of planning Mumbai attacks in 2008

BY SALMAN MASOOD AND DECLAN WALSH

In a move likely to further strain relations with India, a Pakistani court on Friday released on bail Zaki-ur-Rehman Lakhvi, a militant commander accused of orchestrating the 2008 attacks in Mumbai that killed more than 160 people.

Mr. Lakhvi and six other members of the Lashkar-e-Taiba militant group, which carried out the attack, have been on trial at the high-security Adiala jail in Rawalpindi since 2009.

The trial has been conducted in secret and been subject to halting progress, often giving the appearance of being influenced by the vagaries of wider tensions between Pakistan and India.

A court ruling in December that Mr. Lakhvi should be released on bail was opposed by the government led by Nawaz Sharif, the prime minister, which employed various legal maneuvers to keep him in detention.

But those efforts collapsed on Thursday when a Pakistani high court ordered Mr. Lakhvi's immediate release on bail. It was not clear where the militant leader went after he walked free from Adiala jail around 1 p.m. on Friday.

"He is free now and it is a secure place," a senior official with Islamabad-based Dawn, Lashkar-e-Taiba's charity wing, told Agence France-Presse.
