5-16-2015 "Lost to Wars... Soul-Mate and... 1,001 Nobel's in 2015 and more from Berkeley... grin!! CLAIRE stands for

"cathodoluminescence activated imaging by resonant energy transfer." Invented by researchers with the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE)'s Lawrence Berkeley National Laboratory (Berkeley Lab) and the University of California (UC) Berkeley, CLAIRE extends the incredible resolution of electron microscopy to the dynamic imaging of soft matter. "Traditional electron microscopy damages soft materials and has therefore mainly been used to provide topographical or compositional information about robust inorganic solids or fixed sections of biological specimens," says chemist Naomi Ginsberg, who leads CLAIRE's development. "CLAIRE allows us to convert electron microscopy into a new non-invasive imaging modality for studying soft materials and providing spectrally specific information about them on the nanoscale." Ginsberg says. "We should also be able to perform other studies in membrane biophysics to see how molecules diffuse in complex environments, and we'd like to be able to study molecular recognition at the single molecule level." In addition, Ginsberg and her group will be using CLAIRE to study the dynamics of nanoscale systems for soft materials in general. "We would love to be able to observe crystallization processes or to watch a material made of nanoscale components anneal or undergo a phase transition," she says. "We would also love to be able to watch the electric double layer at a charged surface as it evolves, as this phenomenon is crucial to battery science."

"To-You" at the The Bight Management District Board on Wednesday unanimously approved spending $154,000 on a high-resolution, Internet-accessible video surveillance system for the ferry terminal and the rest of the waterfront seaport. The 5-0 decision means Key West Historic Seaport will replace an aging video security system installed in 2004 that staff said is woefully outdated. Cameras at the ferry terminal haven't worked for several months, staff said. The new system, from Bazon-Cox and Associates of Chesapeake, Virginia, includes 35 cameras at the seaport and a dozen at the ferry terminal at Grinnell and Caroline streets. Bight board members quizzed the city's port director, Doug Bradshaw, on the system's value during the meeting at Old City Hall.
