6-2-2015 Beekeepers of 1,001 Invention Projects spelled out with links and iApp's... H @ -254 C in a Bee Hive is just one Invention Project for you to Write a Hemingway House Writing Class Novel with each chapter getting colder or even warmer from H generating Heat and have you check the Oxygen levels of the Bee's vital signs... grin! Food for Thought from Greg in Key West Today. Oh put a electric cow milking machine spin off in the next Bee hive. To feed his habit, Mr. Anderson, 35, keeps bees in the backyard of his home in Broken Head, a village on Australia's east coast near Byron Bay in New South Wales. He comes from a family of hobbyist beekeepers. Ten years ago, he grew impatient with the traditional, labor-intensive methods of extracting honey. In a backyard shed, he and his father, Stuart, invented an alternative setup called Flow Hive, and this year they began to sell it. Domesticated honeybees live in artificial hives — boxes containing wooden frames laced with honeycombs. Bees fill the combs with honey and seal them with wax. Traditionally, to check on the bees' progress, beekeepers don protective suits, sedate the bees with smoke and remove the frames. When it's time to harvest, they cut off the wax caps, place the frames in an extractor and filter out the wax and dead bees. "You're dripping with sweat. You're lifting heavy boxes. And if you've got a grumpy hive, which lots of mine are, they might be stinging you through your bee suit," Mr. Anderson said.

6-2-2015 Invent a iApp to make stars 80 times faster than the Milky Way is making them today. If you think in the "Din" of your Frontal Lobe how do you make Stars 80 times faster and make a few of them burn H different from the other Stars so they will shine for 4 Trillion years you will do a Coup on the July 31 release of Win 10.1 and our 1984 II Dictators who could care less about Loving "Life" in Our Universe! And learn how to write a iApps and how Stars are made + burn H.

6-2-2015 Yale's Elite measured a bona fide distance to one of the farthest and thus earliest galaxies known. The galaxy, more than a few billion light-years on the other side of the northern constellation Boötes, is one of the most massive and brightest in the early universe and goes by the name of EGS-zs8-1. It flowered into stardom only 670 million years after the Big Bang. The light from that galaxy has taken 13 billion years to reach telescopes on Earth. By now, however, since the universe has continued to expand during that time, the galaxy is about 30 billion light-years away, according to standard cosmological calculations. The new measurements allow astronomers to see the galaxy in its infancy. Despite its relative youth, however, it is already about one-sixth as massive as the Milky Way, which is 10 billion years old. And it is getting bigger, making stars 80 times faster than the Milky Way is making them today. The discovery was reported in The Astrophysical Journal by Pascal Oesch of Yale University and his colleagues.
