1-18-2015 Mary Exaggerating Role Playing a Goddess of Inspiration... "When a man is tired of London, he is tired of life," observed the writer Samuel Johnson in the eighteenth century. In fact, research published today suggests such a man may be merely living in the wrong postcode. A study of 56,000 Londoners found that a person's life satisfaction depends, at least in part, on whether their personality suits the place where they live. Overall, the analysis of personality-neighbourhood interactions showed that openness to experience, agreeableness, and conscientiousness were differently associated with life satisfaction of individuals depending on their residential location and specific characteristics of those locations. This suggests that finding the best place to live will depend on the match between individual dispositions and neighbourhood characteristics. Dr Jason Rentfrow from the Department of Psychology and a Fellow of Fitzwilliam College at the University of Cambridge. "Granted, most people don't have the luxury of complete control over where they live, but given their budgets, people can decide whether it's more important to live in the centre of town, where daily life is vibrant and accommodation is small, or further out where daily life is slower but space is more plentiful. Making the decision that fits with your personality could have an effect on your overall life satisfaction."

1-18-2015 Mary Exaggerating Role Playing a Goddess of Inspiration... "When a man is tired of London, he is tired of life," observed the writer Samuel Johnson in the eighteenth century. In fact, research published today suggests such a man may be merely living in the wrong ERA... London 2015 with More Electric Windmill Ford Escorts than parking spaces in London would be my life satisfying ERA in London 2015. Queen Elizabeth in the Tower of London for fire bombing cop cars on the London Freeway, commoners would be in a Utopia Life Satisfying Era in London. Overpass and Underpass at ALL London intersections would let the Electric Windmill Ford's fly by people walking. Cameras at every London Intersection yet Crime and Murdered women go on, has to give the average person in London reason to think they are, the people behind the cameras are the real psychopaths cheering on the Drone Kill. History of London and Henry the VIII suggest the best place to live in London will be after the Revolution that cures the Current Plagues in London! Play "1984 II" with only 2 actors, Greg + Mary will have an extended run in London when it opens. 1,001 Nobels a Year in Medicine won by Oxford Medical Researchers would be a great ERA to read about it all. Wife satisfaction, London Wives and Legal Polygamous Marriages in London, to get

1,001 Nobels a year in literature. Synaptic plasticity... conversations with everyone's grandchildren will add to the Wife's satisfaction children are finally after all these centuries in London School being educated. Gray Matter in the brain between the Wives index finger and thumb rubbing into it her thoughts about synaptic plasticity... hormones, chemicals, electric charges Samuel Johnson in the eighteenth century with Texas Men would have sent Grandmothers to the Tower of London for "Thinking" the impossible. Aliens are at every one of the 52 Nearest Stars. And all we get is Reese in "Wild" grin!

USA Patriot Act, which gave the United States more authority to collect intelligence and pointed America's surveillance apparatus at its citizens. Politicians and civil rights advocates on both sides of the Atlantic bristled at that suggestion, and at a string of arrests in which French officials used a new anti terrorism law to crack down on what previously would have been considered free speech. One man was sentenced to six months in prison for shouting support for the Charlie Hebdo attackers. Up to 100 others are under investigation for remarks that support or tried to justify terrorism, authorities said. Dominique de Villepin, the former French prime minister, warned against the urge for "exceptional" measures. "The spiral of suspicion created in the United States by the Patriot Act and the enduring legitimization of torture or illegal detention has today caused that country to lose its moral compass," he wrote in Le Monde, the French newspaper.

More Effective Imaging of Breast Cancer + Homeland Security taking a picture of every Breast at every airport world wide for Earth's Women advancement! Prostate cancer can spread beyond the prostate gland and become an extraprostatic extension (EPE). Currently, contrast enhanced magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) is used to detect and diagnose prostate cancer. This technique involves injecting patients with a contrast agent to identify where blood flows. This is important because cancerous tissues often undergo angiogenesis. However, there is a problem in that tumors are sometimes indistinguishable from the surrounding healthy tissue and therefore avoid detection. Now researchers and doctors at UC San Diego and UCLA have developed a novel approach to imaging these tumors using diffusion MRI while getting rid of the distortions that come with the technique. Diffusion MRI measures the diffusion of water in biological tissue. Tumors are denser than healthy tissue and thus restrict the flow of water. The* downside to diffusion MRI is that it is susceptible to magnetic artifacts which are distortions in the MR image due to inhomogeneities in the field. Water is an inhomogeneity because it is considered a diamagnetic substance. These distortions can place tumors as much as a half inch (1.2 centimeters) away from the actual location, which can be a major problem. To correct the error, the researchers developed a new imaging method called RSI-MRI, or restriction spectrum imaging-MRI. This approach adjusts for the magnetic field distortions and measures the water diffusion in cancer cells. This technique can also predict tumor grade. In the study, RSI-MRI was able to successfully identify eight out of nine patients with EPE whereas the standard MRI used currently only identified two out of nine.
