2-17-2015 How many There are 100 billion to 200 billion galaxies in the universe. Billions of galaxies have been observed, but only a very small number may hold the key to explaining much of cosmic history. These galaxies – which are far away, moving away fast and very old – are called “high-redshifted” galaxies, so named because they appear red due to the Doppler effect. People are excited about galaxies at high redshift ($z > 6$) these 100 billion to 200 billion galaxies in the universe. The universe is expanding at an increasing rate, a finding that contradicts the laws of physics as they are currently understood, as one would expect gravity to make the universe’s expansion slow down. The work was published in the Astrophysical Journal. Yale professor of physics and study co-author, is a member – is focused on studying the light emitted by supernovae. Light that comes from supernovae that are moving away from the Earth to have a wavelength that is slightly longer than it would be otherwise. Fortunately, the light emitted by supernovae comes in only certain wave lengths, so by comparing data taken from actual supernovae to an idealized model, scientists can reason the velocity with which a supernova is moving toward or away from the Earth. This study figured out a way to make those velocity estimates better by comparing snapshot measurements to measurements taken over time.

June Gruber, professor of psychology at the University of Colorado Boulder and the other senior author of the study, said in an email that the results showing positive emotions as an important ingredient for cooperation were not surprising. From an evolutionary perspective, positive emotions serve a special role in building and maintaining vital social bonds, she explained. These emotions are a critical piece of the glue that ties humans together and helps people survive in social communities, she added. In all the games, it was advantageous for each individual to keep as much money to himself, but it was better for the group if everyone decided to cooperate.
