3-21-2015 WHO ---- is on the "Other Side of 52 Nearest Stars" is the Movie I want Sony to make for the Pentagon!! Grin. I went to the 3D "Insurgent" movie last night and it was good. Way to many women, most of them famous actresses we know shot someone in the HEAD execution style, brainwashing by the Pentagon Programmers. I guess. Lots of attractive women, nice touch as they made the movie. No Sex or kissing, and MRI's goings on in the brain were high tech but Dr. Katrina who's Book "Another Day in the Frontal Lobe" should have been on the "Divergents" reading list for the coup... was not in the movie. Grin. Someone who is Divergent... "Divergent MD" would have been better.

I need a date with Katniss MD MockingJay Part 2 as she does a "Gas Lobotomy" on President Snow after Katniss was strangled by her lover who's Brain was hijacked by President Snow... Katniss might kill Snow in the movie's End... Officer Jason on Fire is Katniss on Fire or should I say the Movie's On Fire were a comment on Fiery 1984 II society's Cars via Gasoline... Everyone even the Pope drives by fiery car crashes on the Freeways! So MockingJay on Fire... Part 2 will have more of this! I hope they have a flash forward for the "Capital" with a 155 Story Eiffel Tower Yale Medical School, grin.

The 'Insurgent' movie is RADICALLY different from the 'Insurgent' book

Insurgent book readers who caught a screening of the movie version were probably all asking themselves the exact same question while they watched: What's in the box?

The entire premise of the Insurgent movie was discovering what's inside a mysterious box, which can only be opened by someone who is Divergent (like Shailene Woodley's Tris, for instance). Jeanine threatens to kill unless Tris gives herself up for experimentation, and we spend most of the movie with the two of them, as Tris is put through five simulations (one for each faction) so that she can open the box. Jeanine is desperate to see the message from the city's founders, although when it finally opens it claims that Divergents are the saviors of the city, and not evil and Jeanine had been claiming.

That's all cool and everything but it also has almost nothing to do with what happens in the book.

In the book there is no box. There is a message, but Jeanine already knows about it and wants no one to hear about it ever. She's afraid of what's beyond the wall and is instead focused on conquering the factions in the city. The reason she wants Tris is so she can create a serum that will work on Divergents – like the one used at the end of Divergent to control the Dauntless soldiers, which Tris and Four were immune to. The simulations in the book have nothing to do with factions, they are simply Jeanine's experiments in creating one strong enough to fight the part of Tris that makes her "Divergent."

Author Veronica Roth told the Hollywood Reporter that the box "streamlines the story." She added:

"It's like they found a way to keep some of my favorite moments: the simulation where Tris fights herself, the simulation where she encounters her mother, the one where she thinks she's getting rescued but she's not – all those things are in the same place, happening at the same emotional peak, which really works."

Evelyn kills Jeanine... The final shot of Insurgent is Evelyn shooting Jeanine, who the Dauntless/Factionless alliance has just deposed. In the book Tori stabs the Erudite leader to avenge her brother's death.

The ending... This ties into all the box-related changes, but the ending of the movie sees a mass migration of the dystopian Chicago citizens towards the city's walls and the outside world. Like it's actually everyone except Evelyn and Jeanine, given how many people you see in the shot. The book ends the moment after the last word of the video message from Edith Prior, and in the first few chapters of Allegiant, Evelyn is preventing anyone from leaving the city.

We're guessing this all means that Alleigiant parts 1 and 2 will be significantly different from the book as well, which we're kind of OK with, given the issues with that installment.

World Famous Willie T's, grin. YOUNTVILLE, Calif. — Perhaps it began with the red Adidas gym bag stuffed with $800,000 in cash. Then came the trail of overhyped and failed wine ventures here in the heart of Napa Valley, and the furious court battles between Robert Dahl, who ran a struggling vineyard, and his chief investor, Emad Tawfilis, who had willingly handed over the gym bag to offer the vintner seed capital. Their dispute, in a region where money flows like, well, wine, climaxed Monday in the style of a pulp fiction thriller, with a wounded Mr. Tawfilis racing frantically through the grapevines as Mr. Dahl, carrying a silencer-equipped .22-caliber semiautomatic pistol and driving a black sport utility vehicle, methodically pursued and then killed him in sight of arriving sheriff's deputies. Mr. Dahl, 47, a former Minnesotan with a checkered background, later shot himself to death as officers closed in!

3-18-2015 "Foreseeable Future" 1.6 million breast biopsies; unless the 4 MD Wives Coup D'Etat is successful! SWF in the USA in 2015 will have 1.6 million breast biopsies; about 20 percent of the tests find cancer. Ten percent identify atypia, a finding that cells inside breast ducts are abnormal but not cancerous. About 60,000 women each year are found to have ductal carcinoma in situ, or D.C.I.S., which also refers to abnormal cells that are confined inside the milk ducts and so are not considered invasive; experts disagree about whether D.C.I.S. is cancer. "It is often thought that getting the biopsy will give definitive answers, but our study says maybe it won't," said Dr. Joann G. Elmore, a professor at the University of Washington School of Medicine in Seattle and the first author of the new study on the accuracy of breast biopsies. Her team asked pathologists to examine biopsy slides, then compared their diagnoses with those given by a panel of leading experts who had seen the same slides. There were some important differences, especially in the gray zone. An editorial in JAMA called the findings "disconcerting." It said the study should be a call to action for pathologists and breast cancer scientists to improve the accuracy of biopsy readings, by consulting with one another more often on challenging cases and by creating clearer definitions for various abnormalities so that diagnoses will be more consistent and precise. The editorial also recommended second opinions in ambiguous cases.
