3-25-2015 Willie T's...you may be fortunate enough to know some brilliant conversationalists who can enliven any discussion and who are excellent company whatever... with Mary can "Brainstorm" an waterproof iPhone 6 + alarm for these deaths... sheriff's office Tuesday identified two men in their 70s who died snorkeling in Key West the day before and released details about a third water death in Key Largo. Richard Gueringer, 71, of San Antonio, Texas, was pronounced dead on arrival at Lower Keys Medical Center after he became unconscious while snorkeling Monday, according to Deputy Becky Herrin. Gueringer and his domestic partner were on a Fury boat snorkel trip and left the boat together, Herrin said. Gueringer entered the water "more quickly," deputies said, and when spotted unconscious was pulled onto the boat. CPR was performed on the boat, Herrin said. Both men were experienced scuba divers, deputies reported. Also on Monday, Larry Coltrin, 72, from Schauwburg, Ill., died after he became unconscious snorkeling in the Dry Tortugas. In Key Largo on Monday, an Illinois woman died after snorkeling offshore on Molasses Reef, deputies said. Julia Thien was visiting Key Largo with her husband and other relatives and were aboard Keys Diver II, owned by Keys Water Adventures, Inc., when she went into the water and reportedly began "having trouble," Herrin said. Thien was pulled back onboard and was given CPR. She was taken to shore where paramedics took over, but was later pronounced dead at Mariner's Hospital. Autopsies were scheduled.

3-25-2015 Yale Campus News Today... U.S., for example, has spent $750 million on aid to sub-Saharan African countries for Ebola relief, yet pharmaceutical companies have not brought an Ebola vaccine to the human trial phase, even though one of those vaccines has been shown to be effective in animals. Karan said this is likely due to the fact that those who would need the vaccine cannot pay for it.

"Infectious diseases strike where they can spread, not necessarily where people can afford to pay profitable prices for medicines," said Kristina Talbert-Slagle GRD '10, senior scientific officer for the Yale Global Health Leadership Institute. "The Ebola outbreak has forced us all to take a careful look at whether and how we are preparing for infectious disease outbreaks."
