11-9-14 DNA was first isolated in the mid 1800s, but its true significance was not discovered until much later. As the field of molecular biology developed, science slowly discovered the incredible importance of DNA – DNA carries all our genetic information across the generations. It took decades to figure out what DNA looks like, but when even when Watson, Crick, and Franklin posited the double-helix, it was an indirect observation. We have never been able to actually see DNA until now.

The 1953 breakthrough describing the double-helix was confirmed using x-ray crystallography. This is a process in which a molecule is bombarded with x-rays which bounce off the atoms. By observing the patterns of the reflected x-rays, scientists can calculate the location of atoms in the molecule. The new research from Enzo di Fabrizio at the University of Genoa is different because it visualizes DNA directly with an electron microscope.

The team created a water repellent surface that caused liquid in samples to dry out very quickly and deposit suspended strands of DNA. The surface is made up of tiny micro pillars that catch the DNA, holding it up where images can be taken. The results are pretty amazing – you can actually see the repeating spiral pattern of DNA.

This first round of images cannot capture individual double-helices. The electron microscope needs to output so much energy to take the pictures, that it blows single strands apart. What you're seeing here are so-called "DNA cords", bundles of six single strands wrapped around a central one.

The hope is that a more sensitive detector capable of capturing images at lower electron energies will allow the researchers to see single strands of DNA. The work could eventually allow scientists to closely study the way proteins and chemical agents interact with your DNA. via New Scientist

No Picture with story will look but Google suppresses Cop Cars on Fire pictures so well see if power boats on fire have any Google picture... 1984 II is Hell. A $750,000, 50-foot turbine, jet-engine powerboat capable of producing more than 3,000 horsepower burnt to the waterline. WOW

A $750,000, 50-foot turbine, jet-engine powerboat capable of producing more than 3,000 horsepower burnt to the waterline Thursday afternoon after bursting into flames gulfside off Lower Matecumbe Key, officials said. Six people on board -- including the boat's owner and operator, Statement Marine owner Todd Werner of St. Petersburg -- were rescued with no injuries by a passing good Samaritan, said Florida Powerboat Club president Stu Jones and a Coast Guard spokesman. The boat was en route to the Southernmost City as part of the annual Key West Powerboat

Poker Run to coincide with the 34th annual Key West World Championship Races, Jones said. Statement Marine was one of the Poker Run's sponsor boats, he added. The boat was still on fire as of 4:15 p.m. The blaze was described as too intense to extinguish, said Coast Guard spokesman Lt. Peter Bermont. Heavy black smoke and dark orange flames were being reported seen from multiple witnesses, officials said. "The Key Largo Fire Rescue arrived on scene just now," Bermont said at 4 p.m. "The FWC (Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission) is setting up a safety perimeter around the vessel as it is burning very intensely." The boat runs on diesel. It was unclear how many gallons of fuel were burning, but officials said they expected it to be several hundred gallons. "It burnt to a crisp," Jones said. How the fire started was unclear Thursday, but Jones described turbine powerboats as high-end performance boats that require a great deal of skill on behalf of the operator. They also produce a high amount of horsepower given their weight. In short, they take a pounding, especially in choppy water, he said. "They break a lot," Jones said. Many turbine boats use remanufactured helicopter jet engines, he added. "It was probably something with the engines," Jones said. "Turbines are extremely hot engines."
