10-20-14 Dr. Nancy Snyderman... our next-door neighbor, who worked for Shell Oil Company, was retired at the age of 50. And my father was furious. So in addition to cutting up his Shell Oil cards, and saying he wouldn't ever get Shell gasoline again—and I don't think he has—he sat me down and said: "This is why you want to become a doctor. You can always tell someone that they're full of it, and still put food on the table." He said: "You should never lose sight of that sense of independence." So I had this love of hospitals, this adoration of my father, and this need to be independent and take care of myself. It was a no-brainer.

10-20-14 Snowstorms and avalanches have killed 39 climbers on a popular hiking route in the Himalayas, Nepali officials say. After a fourth day of searches, 384 people have been rescued from the Annapurna trail, 216 of them foreigners, in the country's worst-ever!!

10-20-14 Navy Fighter Jet Pilots ejecting over a worst-ever avalanche would walk into Nepal...

10-20-14 In my Hippocampus I have reinvented the Himalayas Mt. gear, obvious no one else has as if they all ere in Navy Fighter Jet Pilot jump suits all 39 + would have walked to Nepal taking in the Mountain Tops thinking of "God" and Aliens around all the nearest 52 stars no one else had as if they did NASA would have a JFK Super Shuttle Train not JFK super Carrier Fleet @ $10 Trillion!

Tour guides caught in the snow storm which struck a Himalayan trekking route in Nepal died because they were so poorly equipped, rescue leaders have said amid resentment that foreign hikers are "put first" in the rescue mission.

The Nepal Army's top rescue leader, who led more than 70 hikers to safety following the storm and has since recovered the bodies of 25, said local victims had been wearing casual clothes, including flip flops or trains.

Half of the dead were Nepali porters, guides and cooks, many of whom did not have any warm weatherproof coats or boots to protect them from the freezing snow storm, Captain Adhikari said.

His comments came as the rescue team recovered the 40th victim of the devastating blizzard and warned that some of the dead may not be recovered from the snow until next Spring

"The worst thing was [seeing] the equipment and gear of the Nepali porters and guides because it meant they were dead, but they were not well-equipped," he said.

"The Nepalis I saw were wearing normal dress, some of them in slippers, some had coats and some didn't. They did not have proper clothes or protection from the snow...this could be a factor in why so many Nepalis died."

Tour operators charge up to £1,800 for a three week trek around the Annapurna circuit, but Captain Adhikari said "they're not spending it on the porters". Some carry equipment weighing up to 40 kilograms on their backs and earn as little as £9 a day.

His comments were supported by Baburam Bhandari, the Nepal government's chief district officer in charge of the rescue effort in Mustang, where most of the victims were found dead.

"There was no preparation. Many trekkers that came into the storm arrived without planning," he said.

"Their porters had no trekking shoes or coats. They were in sports shoes and normal clothes because they're poor - it is one of the causes of their deaths. Some of them died because they were too cold - it was freezing snow, five or six feet deep."

Foreign trekkers have prioritised in the rescue effort because many had travel insurance which provided helicopter evacuation for them, but not their guides and porters.

The army's helicopters cannot fly to some of the higher paths and passes and their rescue teams have had to rely on private operators focussed on evacuating foreign trekkers.

The Israeli and Swiss embassies are believed to have sent helicopters to recover their nationals stranded on the passes.

One trekker said a Dutch man had been refused a seat on a helicopter sent by the Israeli government by a crew member who said told him it was for "Israelis only".

"The foreigner is the guest, the sponsor, so the foreigner comes first, it is [a] problem," Mr Bhandari said.

Keshav Pande of the Trekking Agents Association of Nepal said his group offers low cost clothing and equipment rental for porters and guides but many of them believe they do not need them.

Foreign trekkers often hire their own guides directly, rather than through established trekking companies, and are focussed on keeping their costs down.

"If the group is organized they have all the equipment but the tourists want cheaper, they get someone from the street [to guide them]. They want cheap, cheap, cheap", he said.

Hippocampus is were your minds video of Mary B. Elite Yale Key West Med School will give us 100% use of Our Memories! The entorhinal cortex is commonly perceived as a major input and output structure of the hippocampal formation, entertaining the role of the nodal point of cortico-hippocampal circuits. Superficial layers receive convergent cortical information, which is relayed to structures in the hippocampus, and hippocampal output reaches deep layers of entorhinal cortex, that project back to the cortex. The finding of the grid cells in all layers and reports on interactions between deep and superficial layers indicate that this rather simplistic perception may be at fault. Therefore, an integrative approach on the entorhinal cortex, that takes into account recent additions to our knowledge database on entorhinal connectivity, is timely. We argue that layers in entorhinal cortex show different functional characteristics most likely not on the basis of strikingly different inputs or outputs, but much more likely on the basis of differences in intrinsic organization, combined with very specific sets of inputs. Here, we aim to summarize recent anatomical data supporting the notion that the traditional description of the entorhinal cortex as a layered input output structure for the hippocampal formation does not give the deserved credit to what this structure might be contributing to the overall functions of cortico-hippocampal networks.
