6-14-14 MIT Seeing through walls has been a fantasy for many of us since childhood, but while the rest of us grew up, researchers at MIT are now doing things previously thought impossible. While they still don't have the technology to literally see through walls, researchers of the NETMIT group at MIT's Computer Science and Artificial Intelligence Lab, are using WiFi signals to detect the breathing and heart rate of individuals in a room. They've just released a couple videos showing off the technology in action. Here's a demo of a child's respiratory rate and heartbeat being detected from the captured WiFi signals bouncing around the room. 6-14-14 Helicopters Overhead Today! "Windfall" from the "Oil Gods" Holocaust II. Electric Windmill Ford Escort Helicopter Combines + Heavy Lift Helicopters for Ambulance Pick up! Rockefeller, 65, flew his single-engine Piper Meridian turboprop from the airport shortly after 8 a.m. today in fog. The aircraft came down less than a mile away, striking trees and missing a home by about 20 feet (six meters), police and airport officials said. U.S. safety agencies are investigating. "The plane was broken into pieces, and some pieces were lodged in pine trees," Anthony Marraccini, police chief of Harrison, New York, said in an interview. "Some of the main fuselage remained intact." Rockefeller was a great-grandson of John D. Rockefeller, who amassed a fortune after co-founding Standard Oil Co. in 1870 and later focused on charitable giving. Richard Rockefeller celebrated his father's 99th birthday yesterday at a dinner, said Fraser Seitel, a family spokesman. An experienced pilot, he flew yesterday to the Westchester County airport in White Plains, about 30 miles (48 kilometers) north of New York City.
