Image-guided radiation therapy (IGRT) is the process of frequent two and three-dimensional imaging, during a course of radiation treatment, used to direct radiation therapy utilizing the imaging coordinates of the actual radiation treatment plan. [1] The patient is localized in the treatment room in the same position as planned from the reference imaging dataset. An example of IGRT would include localization of a cone-beam computed tomography (CBCT) dataset with the planning computed tomography (CT) dataset from planning. IGRT would also include matching planar kilovoltage (kV) radiographs or megavoltage (MV) images with digital reconstructed radiographs (DRRs) from the planning CT. These two methods comprise the bulk of IGRT strategies!

6-25-14 "Human Consciousness" Epilepsy (from the Ancient Greek verb  $\epsilon\pi\iota\beta\alpha\lambda\epsilon\iota\omega$  meaning "to seize, possess, or afflict") [1] is a group of long-term neurological disorders characterized by epileptic seizures. [2] These seizures are episodes that can vary from brief and nearly undetectable to long periods of vigorous shaking. [3] In epilepsy, seizures tend to recur, and have no immediate underlying cause [2] while seizures that occur due to a specific cause are not deemed to represent epilepsy. [4] In most cases the cause is unknown, although some people develop epilepsy as the result of brain injury, stroke, brain cancer, and drug and alcohol misuse, among others. Epileptic seizures are the result of excessive and abnormal cortical nerve cell activity in the brain. [4] The diagnosis typically involves ruling out other conditions that might cause similar symptoms (such as syncope) as well as figuring out whether any immediate causes are present. Epilepsy can often be confirmed with an electroencephalogram (EEG).

6-25-14 "Human Consciousness" Epilepsy cannot be cured, but seizures are controllable with medication in about 70% of cases. [5] In those whose seizures do not respond to medication, surgery, neurostimulation or dietary changes may be considered. Not all cases of epilepsy are lifelong, and a substantial number of people improve to the point that medication is no longer needed. About 1% of people worldwide (65 million) have epilepsy, [6] and nearly 80% of cases occur in developing countries. [3] Epilepsy becomes more common as people age

The Higgs boson, the long-sought "God particle," may have been discovered in 2012, new research adds to evidence for that discovery. This sub-atomic particle is theorized to provide objects with their mass.

A particle discovered two years ago decays into a type of sub-atomic particle called fermions. These are a family of particles which includes quarks - the components of protons and neutrons, as well as leptons, a family containing electrons. Researchers examining the particle discovered in 2012 include physicists from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT).

When freed 1,001 Invention Projects on a CD and my web page

Particle physicists from the European Organization for Nuclear Research (CERN) found a particle in 2012 that did not behave like any seen before. It had a mass of 125 gigaelectron-volts (GeV). Researchers immediately noticed similarities between their particle and the theoretical Higgs Boson. Physicists calculated that the Higgs boson, could decay into fermions. An international group of physicists has determined that the breakdown of the particle is consistent with properties predicted for the elusive particle.

"When the Higgs boson discovery was announced in 2012, it was based on measurements of the decay of the Higgs to other bosons, the carriers of nature's forces. The results... discuss the decay of Higgs bosons directly to fermions, the particles that make up matter," CERN officials reported.

Protons were accelerated toward each other, and then guided to a collision at nearly the speed of light. Detectors were used to record the new particles that resulted from the ultra-high velocity events.

When freed 1,001 Invention Projects on a CD and my web page

Physicists were carrying out the experiments, searching for a type of particle known as a tau lepton, 3,500 times more massive than electrons. The more mass a particle has, the more it should interact with a Higgs-boson field, permeating the Universe.

Experiments still had to be conducted to confirm the identity of the discovery. Initial experiments showed a three-sigma confidence level, meaning the results of the experiment only has a one in 10,000 chance of happening without a Higgs. The team now wants to increase that certainty to five sigma, having just a one in two million chance of being wrong.

When freed 1,001 Invention Projects on a CD and my web page

The particle accelerator at CERN is currently offline, as facility managers increase the power of the facility by over 60 percent. That will allow researchers to conduct experiments on the basic constituents of matter in a way not possible before.

"Within the current level of precision there is still room for other models with particles that look like the Standard Model Higgs, so we need to accumulate more data to figure out if there is a deviation," Markus Klute, assistant professor of physics at MIT, said.

Physicists also wanted to know if just one type of Higgs boson exists, or if the particle is found forms other than the one they detected.

"This is an enormous breakthrough. Now we know that particles like electrons get their mass by coupling to the Higgs field, which is really exciting," Klute told the press.
