Here in the Keys, it is typical to see gas cans in the beds of trucks for the purpose of fueling ocean vessels and vehicles. However, there are strict guidelines for transporting fuel that is not in the tank of a vehicle. A 25-gallon maximum -- up to five, five-gallon containers -- can be carried together unless licensed otherwise. The containers must also have proper ventilation and an official placard labeling it. "The key is to haul fuel in the proper container," said Fire Marshal Danny Blanco. "Fuel should be carried in DOT-certified containers with proper ventilation because vapor is the most ignitable... vapor ignites before liquid." Every couple of years we have the same issue," Blanco said. "Hopefully, once the word gets out, people will do the right thing and follow these guidelines." ecareaga@keysnews.com

Google will delay the "Winds" of Publix + Whole Foods 100 million a day shoppers getting scanned for... The Wall Street Journal is reporting that Google is initiating a project to identify a slew of biomarkers that point to the presence of a variety of diseases and other chemical signatures that are related to healthy body function. The team will initially collect genetic and molecular information from 175 volunteers using many tests that sample bodily fluids. Later on, the plan is to expand the project, called Baseline Study, to include thousands of people and to identify what a "healthy human" is. This knowledge is aimed at identifying which people should change certain aspects of their lifestyles to account for greater risk of disease, as well as providing new diagnostic tools for physicians to diagnose diseases at their earliest stages.

7-29-14 "#1 Winds of Fortune" iApps for Salk Institute shows that little known supportive cells in the brain known as astrocytes may in fact be major players that control these waves. In a study published July 28 in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, Salk researchers report a new, unexpected strategy to turn down gamma oscillations by disabling not neurons but astrocytes. In the process, the team showed that astrocytes, and the gamma oscillations they help shape, are critical for some forms of memory.
