

HeartAssist5, The Smallest VAD of Its Kind, Implanted for First Time in Advanced Heart Failure Patient

by EDITORS on Jun 30, 2014

Left ventricular assist devices (LVADs) have come a long way in the last decade, keeping people with heart failure alive, including Vice President Dick Cheney, much longer than many thought possible. Not only have they been getting smaller, but they've been getting better at augmenting cardiac output while preventing clot formation. A new LVAD has hit the European market that's smaller than any other and that has unique hemodynamic properties to optimize functionality for the benefit of patients.

7-3-14 iApps... with no ELECTRICITY - Starbucks turn off the juice in the one and only OUTLET Today. I got the warning of LOW Battery on my Acer and shut down. Then checked the Outlet and it was turned off, the Starbucks GIRLS all had "GRINS!!!!" ON THEIR FACES. Observers who read this web and get 1 invention project or 1 iApp going today probably don't think it's as funny as the Starbucks girls! I'm out on the Sidewalk at Duval and Fleming. Greg gets the last laugh... which will be the Rx Overnight Miracle Godsent Cure for Breast Cancer by the 4th of July 2015. Admirable lots more than the Key West Admirals! GRIN...
