8-10-14 Nouveau riche (French: "new rich" rich people who acquired their wealth within their own generation. The equivalent English term is the new rich or new money (in contrast with "old money"). [1] Sociologically, nouveau riche describes the man or woman who previously had belonged to a lower social class and economic stratum (rank) within that class, and that the new money—which constitutes his or her wealth—allowed upward social mobility and provided the means for conspicuous consumption, the buying of goods and services that signal membership in an upper class. As a pejorative term, nouveau riche effects distinctions of type, the given stratum within a social class; hence, among the rich people of a social class, nouveau riche describes the vulgarity and ostentation of the new-rich man and woman who lack the worldly experience and the system of values of Old Money, of inherited wealth, such as the patriciate and the gentry.

In the world depicted in the court papers, the valley executives feared Mr. Jobs, who died in 2011, and did their best to placate him, even at the expense of their own businesses.

For instance, Sergey Brin, Google's co-founder, was quoted as testifying that Mr. Jobs's view seemed to be that people shouldn't upset him.

Things that appeared to upset him, Mr. Brin said, "would be hiring, you know — whatever." And Eric Schmidt, then Google's chief executive, said: "Steve was unhappy, and Steve's unhappiness absolutely influenced the change we made in recruiting practice." At one point, Mr. Jobs got a Google recruiter terminated for attempting to hire from Apple.

Appointed to the federal court in 2010, Judge Koh is the first Asian-American district judge in the Northern District of California. Before becoming a federal judge, she was a judge for the Superior Court of California for Santa Clara County. She also worked in Washington for the Senate Judiciary Committee and later for the Justice Department.

She has overseen many of the most prominent tech-related cases, including the big patent fights between Apple and Samsung Electronics. She has built a reputation for keeping strict control of her courtroom, showing no hesitation to challenge even the most powerful lawyers when she feels they are involved in shenanigans.
