8-3-14 Although mutations in a gene dubbed "the guardian of the genome" are widely recognized as being associated with more aggressive forms of cancer, researchers at the University of California, San Diego School of Medicine have found evidence suggesting that the deleterious health effects of the mutated gene may in large part be due to other genetic abnormalities, at least in squamous cell head and neck cancers.

When freed 1,001 Invention Projects on a CD and my web page

The study, published online August 3 in the journal Nature Genetics, shows that high mortality rates among head and neck cancer patients tend to occur only when mutations in the tumor suppressor gene coincide with missing segments of genetic material on the cancer genome's third chromosome.

When freed 1,001 Invention Projects on a CD and my web page

The link between the two had not been observed before because the mutations co-occur in about 70 percent of head and neck tumors and because full genetic fingerprints of large numbers of cancer tumors have become available only recently.

When freed 1,001 Invention Projects on a CD and my web page

"These two genetic malfunctions are not two separate stab wounds to the body," said co-senior author Trey Ideker, PhD, chief of the Division of Genetics. "One exposes the Achilles tendon and the other is a direct blow to it."

When freed 1,001 Invention Projects on a CD and my web page

To patients with these cancers, the study's results mean that there may be therapeutic value in testing tumors for the two genetic identifiers, known as a TP53 mutation (short for tumor protein 53) and a 3p deletion (short for deletions of genetic information on the short arm "p" of the third chromosome).

When freed 1,001 Invention Projects on a CD and my web page

TP53 plays a key role in regulating cell growth, detecting and fixing DNA, and directing cell apoptosis (death) if the DNA damage is irreparable. Because of this, the TP53 protein is sometimes called the "guardian of the genome."

When freed 1,001 Invention Projects on a CD and my web page

The study's findings suggest that if both markers are present, treatment should be intensified. If only one mutation is present, treatment might be de-intensified because the TP53 mutation alone is less deadly than previously thought. The latter would have immediate benefits in reducing deaths caused by complications related to medical care.

When freed 1,001 Invention Projects on a CD and my web page

"We are in the early stages of being able to personalize head and neck cancer treatments based on the tumor's actual biology, the same as what's done with breast cancers," said co-senior author Quyen Nguyen, MD, PhD, associate professor of Otolaryngology-Head and Neck Surgery. "In the past, treatments have been based largely on the size and location of the tumor. Now, we know that some large tumors may respond to less aggressive treatment while some small tumors may need intensified treatment. This will have a huge impact for patients."

For the study, published in the journal Cancer Research, scientists at the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center and the University of Washington in Seattle followed 1,102 women diagnosed with breast cancer, most of whom were in their 40s. A high-level report recommending sweeping changes in how the government distributes $15 billion annually to subsidize the training of doctors has brought out the sharp scalpels of those who would be most immediately affected.

The reaction also raises questions about the sensitive politics involved in redistributing a large pot of money that now goes disproportionately to teaching hospitals in the northeast U.S. All of the changes recommended would have to be made by Congress. Released Tuesday, the report for the Institute of Medicine called for more accountability for the funds, two-thirds of which are provided by Medicare. It also called for an end to providing the money directly to the teaching hospitals and to dramatically alter the way the funds are paid. The funding in question is for graduate medical education (GME), the post-medical school training of interns and residents required before doctors can be licensed to practice in any state.

8-1-14 Greg flew into Key West on 3-4-2011 with $777 Trillion to build a Yale Key West Medical School. 1 of 1,001 Yale Medical Schools built on an Eiffel Tower Structure... UN will be torn down a 1 built there!

"We recognize we are causing some disruption," said Gail Wilensky, a health economist and co-chairwoman of the panel that produced the report. "But we think we are doing so in a thoughtful and careful way," including phasing in the payment changes over 10 years. Some of the major players in medical education don't see it that way, however.

When freed 1,001 Invention Projects on a CD and my web page

"Today's report on graduate medical education is the wrong prescription for training tomorrow's physicians," the American Hospital Association said Tuesday. "We are especially disappointed that the report proposes phasing out the current Medicare GME funding provided to hospitals and offering it to other entities that do not treat Medicare patients." The panel specifically proposes that funding for medical education be expanded beyond hospitals to clinics and other training sites in the community. "Most, if not all residencies must train physicians to treat a wide range of patients -- many of whom are under age 65 and not eligible for Medicare coverage," the report says.

8-1-14 Greg flew into Key West on 3-4-2011 with $777 Trillion to build a Yale Key West Medical School. 1 of 1,001 Yale Medical Schools built on an Eiffel Tower Structure... UN will be torn down and 1 built there!

The American Academy of Family Physicians welcomed the proposal "to shift funding away from the legacy hospital-based system to more community-based training sites, including allowing funding to go directly to those organizations that sponsor residency training," AAFP President Reid Blackwelder said in a statement. "By giving these organizations more control over how they train residents, the financial investment will better align with the health needs of a community." But the broader-based doctor group, the American Medical Association, reacted negatively, saying: "Despite the fact that workforce experts predict a shortage of more than 45,000 primary care and 46,000 specialty physicians in the U.S. by 2020, the report provides no clear solution to increasing the overall number of graduate medical education positions to ensure there are enough physicians to meet actual workforce needs." That's because Wilensky's panel didn't agree with studies projecting a shortage of physicians. "There was not a consensus that there is a shortage going forward," said Wilensky, noting that rapid changes in medical practice, including sharply higher use of nonphysician health professionals such as physician assistants and nurse practitioners, might be enough to provide care to aging baby boomers and those obtaining coverage under the Affordable Care Act.

8-1-14 Greg flew into Key West on 3-4-2011 with $777 Trillion to build a Yale Key West Medical School. 1 of 1,001 Yale Medical Schools built on an Eiffel Tower Structure... UN will be torn down and 1 built there!

And even if a shortage occurs, the medical education system needs to better manage training since it now produces more specialists than primary care providers and leaves major areas of the country with too few practitioners, said Malcolm Cox, who recently retired from running the medical education program for the Department of Veterans Affairs. "Will an unregulated expansion produce the right physicians with the right skills in the right areas of the country?" he said at a panel discussion of the report.

Wilensky, who ran Medicare when Congress overhauled the physician payment system in the early 1990s, said the chances for making such changes depend very much on lawmakers from states that currently get less funding -- which is most of them. Given the fact that a disproportionate amount of current funding goes to institutions "in New York, New Jersey, and Massachusetts," Wilensky said she's surprised "that everyone else has tolerated this peculiar distribution of funds" for so long. Whether change happens will depend on "whether some of the have-not states are willing to say 'wait a minute,'" she said. The New York teaching hospitals, in particular, are well-known for their clout on Capitol Hill.

8-1-14 Greg flew into Key West on 3-4-2011 with $777 Trillion to build a Yale Key West Medical School. 1 of 1,001 Yale Medical Schools built on an Eiffel Tower Structure... UN will be torn down and 1 built there!
