The towering 195-foot-tall Atlas 5's Russian-built RD-180 first-stage engine thundered to life with a rush of fiery exhaust at 6:28 a.m. EDT (GMT-4), followed an instant later by ignition of two solid-fuel strap on boosters. It was the 57th launch of an Atlas 5 since the rocket's maiden flight in 2002 and ULA's 100th flight since the company, a partnership between Boeing and Lockheed Martin, was formed in 2006 to market Delta boosters and Atlas 5s. 10-2-2015 Nightly News From Key West with Greg + Wives... 4 MD Wives Coup D'Etat The infected cooling towers in Morris Park – on buildings including the Bronx Psychiatric Center and Albert Einstein College of Medicine facilities – were discovered after inspectors tested 35 towers in the area this past weekend. The city found this week that bacteria had regrown in at least 15 towers that had been cleaned recently in the Morris Park section of the Bronx. The testing occurred after a fresh outbreak in that area that has killed one person and sickened at least 12, and spurred an order from health officials for the towers to be disinfected again. One Dead in New Bronx Outbreak of Legionnaires' Disease SEPT. 30, 2015 Jason Davis from Metro Group cleaned the cooling tower on top of a Manhattan apartment building on West 12th Street on Friday. Order to Clean Towers Strains Crews Amid Legionnaires' Outbreak in Bronx AUG. 16, 2015 Building owners have complained about the costs of the mandatory cleanings. Disinfection specialists said the bacteria's quick return was not surprising because the bacteria thrives in warmer weather, and supported the notion that the cleanings were only a short-term fix.

10-2-2015 Nightly News From Key West with Greg + Wives... 4 MD Wives Coup D'Etat Yale needs some 1984 II + III cameras watching the MD... read this. Skip Thurman, a spokesperson for DaVita, told the News the company strongly disagrees with Mahnensmith's allegations. "Med school prof denies assault charges" Sara Seymour Staff Reporter Yale Daily News Former Yale nephrologist Rex Mahnensmith MED '77 is counter-suing the seven plaintiffs who filed a February federal lawsuit against him for sexual assault and sex discrimination. Mahnensmith is also suing the clinic in which the alleged harassment took place. Six women and one man filed lawsuits against Mahnensmith, Yale University and DVA Renal Healthcare, Inc. — a subsidiary of DaVita HealthCare Partners, Inc. "When Dr. Mahnensmith's conduct was brought to our leadership's attention, we acted swiftly in conducting a thorough investigation," Thurman wrote in an email to the News. "We determined it was important for us to remove Mahnensmith as medical director. The safety and health of our patients and teammates is a primary focus.” In the original lawsuit, the plaintiffs alleged that on two occasions, Mahnensmith thrust his pelvis in a sexual manner against the chair a female plaintiff was sitting in. The male plaintiff offered Mahnensmith a seat, but he did not sit down, the original lawsuit said. “Dr. Mahnensmith replied with a smirk, ‘I’m not finished yet,’ and continued to sexually gratify himself until announcing to the group that he was finished,” the complaint read. But Mahnensmith denied these allegations in his counterclaim, stating that he was simply doing exercises to reduce the pain caused by his degenerative spine disease, right leg sciatica and osteoarthritis. Mahnensmith’s lawyer compared accusations lobbed against his client to events in “The Crucible,” a play about the Salem Witch Trials. “[Mahnensmith] says he didn’t do it, they say he did,” Mitchell said. “Why people get together and do this, I don’t know, but hopefully we’ll find that out in the course of developing the facts behind the case.” Other allegations, including claims Mahnensmith touched a female plaintiff inappropriately on other occasions, made sexual comments and created a hostile work environment were dismissed by Mahnensmith as fabrications or easily explainable misunderstandings. He described these allegations as examples of the “collective torment” he was subjected to by the plaintiffs and part of a larger plan to remove him as the director of the clinic. Jennifer Zito, who represents six of the seven plaintiffs, denied all of Mahnensmith’s claims. “Dr. Mahnensmith’s allegations against the individual plaintiffs I represent are baseless and incredulous,” Zito said in an email to the News. “The allegation that [seven] plaintiffs each individually, each for their own personal reasons, just fabricated accusations of sexual harassment defies common sense.” The plaintiffs of the original lawsuit are also suing Yale for inadequately supervising Mahnensmith, alleging that the University's failure to act appropriately in this case falls into a broader pattern of unresponsiveness in the face of sexual misconduct allegations against faculty members. Yale spokeswoman Karen Peart declined to comment on the countersuit and whether Mahnensmith was under any supervision at the clinic. Peart said the University cannot discuss the lawsuit as it is currently in litigation and the details of Yale's arrangement with DaVita are issues relevant to the suit. Mahnensmith has been in full-time clinical practice and various teaching positions since 1984.
