Review; 007 "Spectre" MD Oxford girls, women today. First 4 days at Oxford in 2015 reading George Orwell's comments about "Foggy Bottoms" and Big Brother not watching out for your health.

"The Return of London's Fog" By CHRISTINE L. CORTON New York Times. Cambridge, England – IN January, researchers at King's College London announced that pollution levels on Oxford Street, in central London, had exceeded limits set for the entire year in just the first four days of 2015. Similarly alarming numbers have been recorded for other streets in the city – and yet the mayor, Boris Johnson, has delayed implementation of stricter air-quality measures until 2020. What's happening in London is being played out in cities worldwide, as efforts to curtail the onslaught of air pollution are stymied by short-term vested interests, with potentially disastrous results. This is not the first time that society has confronted a threat of this kind. In the 19th century, the Industrial Revolution brought millions into the world's cities, which expanded with unprecedented rapidity, leading to atmospheric pollution as the fossil fuels burned in urban homes poured huge quantities of sooty, sulfurous emissions into the air. Nowhere was this more obvious, or more threatening, than in the greatest of all Victorian cities, London, where air pollution was literally in front of everyone's face in the form of the city's infamous, polluted fog.

Ms. Rosario 88 was walking south along Columbus Avenue when she entered the crosswalk at West 109th Street, about a block from her home, and had the right of way, the police said. Mr. Abubkar, who had a green light as he traveled south on the avenue, turned right at 109th Street, striking her, the police said. She fell to the ground and later died from her injuries at St. Luke's-Roosevelt Hospital, the police said. 111 pedestrians had been killed in crashes this year through Thursday, the most recent date for which statistics were available, down from 113 over the same period the year before.

Mayor Bill de Blasio committed itself to trying to reduce such deaths to zero - Yale test quiz now, the taxi drive had a green light right. Why the Hell didn't the Mayor make all lights "Walk" in all 4 directions... and all lights "Red" with no turns on "Red" this would have saved 100 deaths in 2015... can we sue the Mayor for this F grade? I will try to get Yale Law to sue for $100 million for each death that would have been prevented with this traffic light program! And the one's that got run over and didn't die. $100 million each. LONDON – The British drug maker AstraZeneca said on Friday that it had agreed to acquire ZS Pharma, a California-based biopharmaceutical company, for $2.7 billion in cash. The transaction is expected to improve AstraZeneca's pipeline of treatments for cardiovascular and metabolic diseases and comes as the British drug maker is set to lose exclusivity in the United States for its best-selling cholesterol treatment, Crestor, next year. ZS Pharma's signature drug is ZS-9, a treatment for high potassium levels, which are typically associated with chronic kidney disease and chronic heart failure.

Oil especially in London has infected everyone and our 1984 II Dictators give the Rx Drug Makers Billions in perks not to complain about BP Oil's revenues of $777 Trillion, grin. Rx Recipes for Girl Scouts will not be Cookie Recipes after the coup! Many Americans, when faced with a serious health risk like high cholesterol, opt to take a pill rather than adopt healthier living habits. A middle-aged woman I know is typifies this attitude. Thrilled with how well medication has controlled her rising cholesterol level, she continues to indulge in foods rich in cholesterol-raising saturated fats. She also carries around more body fat, especially risky abdominal fat, than is considered healthful. Dr. Philip Greenland, a cardiologist and epidemiologist at Northwestern University Feinberg School of Medicine, said, "People should be following a heart-healthy diet, keeping their weight under control and exercising regularly. This would be a highly preferable approach. Unfortunately, it's not the direction we're going in."

The crash of a United States Marines helicopter in Nepal in May that killed 13 people during earthquake rescue operations was most likely caused by the crew's decision to fly the most direct route to Kathmandu, the capital, the Marines said Saturday. The UH-1 Huey helicopter took the shorter route from a village east of the capital over unfamiliar terrain "due to a real or perceived urgency" concerning the condition of the injured civilians, according to a statement by the Third Marine Expeditionary Force in Okinawa, Japan. The investigation found that it was most likely that the aircraft "was enveloped by rapidly developing clouds or lifted into a cloud by rising air currents." At that point, the investigators said they believed, the crew lost sight of the ground, leading to the crash. Six American Marines, two Nepalese Army officials and five civilians were on board the helicopter. "legal implications," and could help to determine who would compensate the families of the deceased. General Shrestha said in a telephone interview, "and they're very much aware that they're not from a rich background; they have a heartfelt feeling for them." $$$ But compensation for the families was a delicate matter because any action taken by the Marines could set a precedent for future episodes, the general said.
