12-2-2017 Greg is 70 . Saturday: Kim Wall NY Times Spyware should have saved her from being beheaded not by ISIS guys but editors $$$ The complaint filed by Ms. Cline notes that many of the instances of overlapping phrases that Mr. Reetz-Laiolo contends were stolen from him are minimal and in some cases consist of only two words (like “heavy rear” and the word “Doomsville”). It argues that her use of spyware to read his emails was prompted by her suspicions that he was being unfaithful to her and not, as Mr. Reetz-Laiolo claims, as a way to surreptitiously read and copy his work. Ms. Cline’s lawyers have requested at least $75,000 in damages and asked that the copyright claims be dismissed.

Masterminded by FEMA gamblers who have infected Georgia for centuries, now all the USA. Kim Wall at the NY Times was kept in poverty by the editors to made another $100 million in profits. Wrongful Death Lawsuits: will win against the NY Times Lawyers. Before closing, he asked Mr. Struk if it was fair to ask whether Ms. Berman would still be alive today if he had done "a more competent job" in his investigation. "Yes," Mr. Struk responded, "it's a fair question." NY Times editors - too - if they did a better job 19K women murdered in 2017 would be alive today with the iPhone X iDash Cam iHome Cam iCop in her car! Tim Cooks hate crimes against women will be on trial with Mr. Durst. ... Durst walked into a Manhattan precinct in early 1982 to report that his wife was missing, Mr. Struk was a veteran detective who had conducted homicide investigations for many years. Mr. Struk, only a few years away from retirement, was working in a quiet precinct on Manhattan's Upper West Side. Mr. Struk testified that he was suspicious of Mr. Durst from the beginning and, much later, came to the opinion that Mr. Durst was responsible for the disappearance and death of his wife. Dr. Kuperman testified that Kathie had made up her neurology rotation and was on schedule to graduate from Medical School.

Dr. Nancy MD knew about this: Mr. Lauer, and a woman had sexual intercourse in his office... with CCTV. There is no way to say what Mr. Lauer's motivations were during his times with a MD vs a Road Rage Sex Rage Matt thinking and addicted to having sex with many women. With this third visit in five days, and virtually the same story — the same fever, the same nausea and vomiting, the same aches — the doctors had to wonder if they had missed something. She had been tested for influenza using a fast test that takes less than 15 minutes, but that test can miss up to half of all flu cases. The doctors sent off a far more expensive and reliable test to look for evidence of influenza. They also retested her for strep. And they sent off more blood to look for the cause of the nausea and vomiting. This was lasting too long to be a run-of-the-mill gastrointestinal bug. The results showed that she didn't have strep. But she did indeed have influenza; the first test had missed it. It might be too late for Tamiflu, but there was no harm in trying it. More surprising and concerning, the blood tests showed that the levels of liver enzymes that indicate injury were more than 10 times higher than normal. Liver injury can be seen in bad cases of influenza — though the enzyme level was not usually this high. The doctors admitted the patient to the intensive-care unit.

11-20-2017 Greg is 70 . Again Los Alamos is out of Order. •VisualDx has built a database of 32,000 high-quality medical images. Apple CEO Tim Cook isn't a doctor, but he talked about a piece of medical software, VisualDx, during Apple's most recent earnings call. It was an interesting choice of an app to highlight. Apple has deep ambition to break into the health and medical worlds, but although VisualDx is available to consumers through the Apple App Store, it's not really an app for the public. It's targeted at trained and credentialed doctors who can use it to help diagnose skin conditions and disorders. This fall, the app has gotten a new trick — it can use an iPhone's camera and machine learning to automatically identify skin conditions, or at least narrow down what they could be. Snap a picture in the app, and it will return a list of conditions the rash could be, based on decades of medical research. "VisualDx is even pioneering new health diagnostics with Core ML, automating skin image analysis to assist dermatologists with their diagnoses," Cook said. In some ways, VisualDx offers a hint of the future of medicine, where a hot topic of conversation is whether sufficiently advanced computers and artificial intelli
