12-3-2015 PARIS — La Belle Équipe; The Beautiful Team with Los Alamos, Apple, Starbucks... Reading the ruling reached by a panel of five judges, Justice Eric Leach said that having armed himself with a high-caliber weapon, Pistorius must have foreseen that whoever was behind the door might die. "As a matter of common sense at the time the fatal shots were fired, the possibility of the death of the person behind the door was clearly an obvious result. "And in firing not one but four shots, such a result became even more likely," the judge said. Pistorius always maintained that he believed there was an intruder in the house but the judge said that the identity of the person behind the door was "irrelevant to his guilt". Justice Leach compared it to someone setting off a bomb in a public place not knowing who the victims might be. He also rejected the argument that Pistorius had acted in self-defence. The judge argued that his life was not in danger at the time of the shooting, as Pistorius did not know who was behind the door or if they posed a threat. He added that Pistorius did "not take that most elementary precaution of firing a warning shot". South Africa's top appeals court found the Olympic star guilty of murder in the 2013 killing of his girlfriend, overturning an earlier conviction of manslaughter.

12-3-2015 PARIS — La Belle Équipe; The Beautiful Team with Los Alamos, Apple, Starbucks.. Mr. Farook, 28, who was born in Illinois and whose parents are from Pakistan, joined colleagues at an annual holiday party for the San Bernardino County Public Health Department, where he worked for five years as an environmental inspector, $70,000 a year. officials said. He had attended the same party the year before, and he did not appear out of place. Soon, however, he stormed out in anger. The nature of the dispute was not clear, but when he returned with his wife, 27, both of them were dressed in tactical gear and carrying assault rifles, officials said. That level of preparation is among the factors investigators are weighing as they examine a motive for the attack.

Physiology of memory... should have been pre-loaded in Win 10 instead of Groove Music!

However, it's almost certainly not that simple. This Stanford team has put forth the idea of mobile memories, in which the hippocampus does indeed store the specifics of new memories in its synaptic connections, but after a while those memories move to elsewhere in the brain. The team found that if they disrupted the hippocampus within a month or so of a new memory, the memory disappeared forever. If they disrupted it after a longer period of time, the memory seemed undisturbed – as though it no longer physically resides in those same cells.

This seems to provide a fairly stark physiological difference that could form the basis for some of the distinctions between short and long term memory – but if the study of memory has taught us anything, it's that we can't assume it works in a simple or reasonable way. Occam's Razor may still apply to the physiology of memory.
