8-18-2019 Miracle Cure today for 100 million alcoholics, And she was a smoker. Plagues of London and Paris world wide. How can a young woman die so suddenly she doesn't even have time to call for help? At 42, my sister seemed pretty healthy. But she was also an alcoholic. For the past 15 or so years, her life had been dominated by the desire, and then the need, to drink.

8-18-2019 Miracle Cure today for 100 million alcoholics, Low blood potassium -- hypokalemia -- is a well-described complication of alcoholism. When taken in excess, alcohol can cause the body to dump electrolytes like potassium and magnesium. Normally this would not cause a problem; most of us eat far more than our bodies can use, and the extra comes out in our urine. But because alcoholism can also interfere with normal eating, alcoholics sometimes don't replace these chemicals. Once these key electrolytes get outside the normal range, it's hard for the body to work well. If they get too far from normal, it can't work at all: the heart simply stops. No pain, no time to reach for the phone.

8-18-2019 Miracle Cure today for 100 million alcoholics, she'd been on a binge when she went to the hospital before, and she'd been on one when she died. She probably hadn't been eating. In the past she'd lost 10 pounds while binge drinking. Given the speed of her death and the lack of findings on autopsy, an arrhythmia - - the erratic beating of the heart -- was the most likely cause, and it was reasonable to think that her lack of potassium may have brought it on.
