Fred Koch made millions in the 1920s and '30s by inventing a process to extract more gasoline from crude oil and by building refineries in the Soviet Union. David graduated from the exclusive Deerfield Academy in Massachusetts and studied chemical engineering at M.I.T., earning a bachelor's degree in 1962 and a master's in 1963. He worked for engineering firms in Cambridge, Mass. Mr. Koch's philanthropies went mostly to medical, educational and cultural institutions. He listed gifts of more than $395 million to medical research causes and institutions in recent decades. The largest was $150 million to Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Center to build the David H. 8-22-2019 On the Menu; The man had been active and healthy, until five years earlier when he started to feel tired. His doctor sent him to a cardiologist, who took one look at his EKG and said he needed a pacemaker, right away. He got one the next day. In the E.R. they told him his heart was beating 220 beats a minute. You should be dead, one doctor said. They took out his pacemaker and replaced it with an implant able cardioverter-defibrillator (I.C.D.) — a device to shock his heart back into a regular rhythm if it ever took off as it had earlier that day. What is left is a scar, known as fibrosis, dotted with these abnormal granulomas. It's not clear what triggers the illness to start or why or how it spreads. It's commonly seen in young adults and often in African-Americans. Though the man and his sister were of Eastern European descent, and the disease doesn't usually afflict siblings, Horn thought sarcoidosis was the most likely diagnosis. When caught early, sarcoidosis can be treated and the destruction slowed or even stopped. But it was too late for that in this man's case. He was started on immune-suppressing medications to prevent additional damage, but he needed a new heart. Newark Beth Israel Medical Center: There was a heart. He kissed his children and drove himself to the hospital. That was six years ago.
